POSTGRADUATE RANKINGS 2022

Welcome... To the 2022 SportBusiness Postgraduate Course Rankings

As another year speeds by, the time to publish the latest edition of the SportBusiness Postgraduate Rankings has once again come around. Now entering its 11th edition, the rankings remain as competitive as ever with familiar courses jostling for the top positions, as well as some newer contenders making their mark on the rankings. While aspects of how the rankings are conducted continue to evolve, the purpose remains the same – to provide students and course leaders alike with the most dependable and reliable ranking system for postgraduate sports management programmes around the world.

The 2021 edition of the Postgraduate Rankings described the impact of the Covid-19 pandemic as the dominant theme of the academic year. While the pandemic is by no means over or forgotten, it is pleasing to be able to remark that its impact is a less prominent consideration this year. Indeed, course leaders have begun to talk more about the return to normality, with a greater number of in-person classes and large-scale events being held. Moreover, there is a sense that rather than grappling with the impact of the circumstances, universities are now able to look upon the period reflectively and translate learnings from the challenges into improving future practices.

Following on from the precedent of previous editions, the rankings are complemented by a suite of content in the pages that follow. In both North America and Europe, each of the top three courses are covered by a snapshot overview, as well as an Alumni Interview and Academic Insight article, showcasing the work and expertise of those who have graduated the programmes and those who teach on them.

There is also a poignant note to this year's edition, with a tribute article dedicated to Florida Atlantic University stalwart Jim Riordan, who sadly passed away earlier this year.

Readers will also find the first edition of Professor Dino Ruta's series of interviews with athletes on their academic endeavours. This type of article will form part of a regular content series featured on the SportBusiness University platform in the coming months.

Another regular content stream on the SportBusiness University platform is our Academic Insight series and this year we have decided to celebrate the most viewed article that has been published within this feature over the past 12 months. The article in question comes from Loughborough University's Dr Alex Thurston, who wrote about how adhering to internationally accepted procurement integrity frameworks and standards helps sport practitioners mitigate integrity risks and, consequently, potential corruption risks inherently linked to international sport event procurement.

As in previous years, feature articles have also been written especially for the rankings for those who enjoy a longer read. This year, we focus on the topics of networking and esports education.

Methodology

Our rankings are based on two surveys, completed by course leaders and alumni who graduated three years prior to publication – meaning the 2022 edition is based on responses from the classes of 2019. Each course is ultimately given a score out of 100 based on a weighted average of results from both the graduate and course leader surveys. ○
